Types of Colleges

- Public Colleges are funded by local and state governments and usually offer lower tuition rates than private colleges, especially for students who are residents of the state here a college is located.
- Private Colleges rely mainly on tuition, fees and private sources of funding. Private donations can sometimes provide generous financial aid packages for students.
- Four-year Colleges offer four-year programs that lead to a bachelor's degree. These include universities and liberal arts colleges.
- Two-year Colleges offer programs that last up to two years that lead to a certificate or an associate degree. These include community colleges, vocational-technical colleges and career colleges.
- Liberal Arts Colleges offer a broad base of courses in the liberal arts, which includes areas such as literature, history, languages, mathematics and life sciences. Most are private and offer four-year programs that lead to a bachelor's degree. These colleges can prepare you for a variety of career or for graduate study.
- Universities often are larger and offer more majors and degree options – bachelor's master's and doctoral degrees,-- than colleges. Most universities contain several smaller colleges, such as colleges of liberal arts, engineering or health sciences.
- Community College offer two-year associate degrees that prepare you to transfer to a four-year college to earn a bachelor's degree. They also offer other associate degrees and certificates that focus on preparing you for a certain career.
- Vocational-Technical and Career Colleges offer specialized training in a particular industry or career. Possible programs of study include the culinary arts, firefighting, dental hygiene and media-records technology. These colleges usually offer certificates or associate degrees.
